« Health Promotion 101 »	Le dimanche 19 juin, 10 h 30 - 12 h 30
Suzanne Jackson, directrice	Centre for Health Promotion, Université de Toronto

SOMMAIRE : This workshop is designed for those who need a basic introduction to the field of health promotion as it is understood in Canada. The major concepts, definitions, distinguishing features, and strategies will be presented and discussed within an historical context. Examples will be presented that apply to community and agency work in Ontario. In addition handouts and other resources will be available for those who wish more information.

BIOGRAPHIE : Suzanne Jackson is the Director of the Centre for Health Promotion at the University of Toronto. She has conducted research in community capacity indicators, economic evaluation in health promotion, empowerment indicators, indicators of health promotion for international use, and community systems. She specializes in participatory planning, research and evaluation consultations with grassroots community groups and community health organizations. Suzanne has worked in health promotion research for almost ten years in Canada and internationally and she has eleven years accumulated experience working in the public sector for the Ontario Ministry of Health and the Toronto Department of Public Health. Suzanne received her PhD from the School of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Waterloo. She has been President of the Ontario Public Health Association, vice-president of the Canadian Public Health Association and chair of the Board of Directors of ICA Canada (a community development and facilitated group decision-making organization). She has been invited to speak on health promotion topics in various parts of Canada, USA, Jakarta, Australia, Mexico, Colombia, Germany, and Brazil.

« Ethics and Research in Health Promotion »	Le dimanche 19 juin 10 h 30 - 12 h 30

SOMMAIRE : Those working in the health promotion field are sometimes asked to do some research in the community or evaluate a program. In this work, participants need to be aware of what the ethical issues are, when to go through an ethical review and how to address the key issues likely to be faced in health promotion. This session will be hands on workshop about ethical issues and the appropriate responses. This will be done with the particular issues and contexts of health promotion in mind, including key informant processes, participatory research, and working with vulnerable populations.

BIOGRAPHIE : Suzanne Jackson is the Director of the Centre for Health Promotion at the University of Toronto. She has conducted research in community capacity indicators, economic evaluation in health promotion, empowerment indicators, indicators of health promotion for international use, and community systems. CÉRÉMONIES DES PREMIERS PEUPLES

The Opening and Closing is done in a traditional Anishnawbek manner.

It is Ceremony.

This particular ceremony is as old as time.

All original Nations have their own ways to do this.

It is not acceptable to consider one 'way' better than another. Instead, all ceremonies are highly regarded and respected for their sacred nature.

Centre for Health Promotion
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Anishnawbek Way brings a holistic approach that integrates spiritual, physical, mental and emotional aspects of ourselves and the world around us.

Through the process of opening and closing, we literally explore what surrounds us and what is inside us.

We want to ensure that we are gathering everything we need to carry out the tasks ahead.

It is to help bring the body, mind and spirit of each of us together.

Ceremony also reminds of us how we are to behave in a balanced manner for the benefit of ourselves and generations that will follow.

We generally have four sacred medicines that are burned: tobacco, cedar, sage and sweet grass.

We welcome everyone to join in ceremony as we open the Health Promotion Summer School.

BIOGRAPHIES : Jan Kahehti:io Longboat-Mohawk Nation, Turtle Clan, Six Nations of the Grand River Territory. She is presently Keeper of Earth Healing Herb Farm and Retreat on Six Nations.

Kahehti:io is a Teacher, Herbalist, Healer, Keeper of the old ways. She travels extensively to share her Indigenous Knowledge of «Now, Now, Now» and how the Now continues to sustain the Severn Generations to come.

Herbert Nabigon's Spiritual Name is Maangiins (which means Little Loon). Herb is from Pic River First Nation. He received his MSW degree in social work from Carleton University, 1977. He has been an elementary and high school teacher and he was a senior policy analyst for the department of Indian Affairs, in Ottawa.

Since 1989 to the present, Herb is an Associate Professor with the Native Human Services BSW Social Work program at Laurentian University in Sudbury, and is currently the coordinator of the program. He was appointed Elder for the Assembly of First Nations (A.F.N.) in May of 1977 where his role is to provide spiritual guidance and was a senior advisor to the research process. He continued with the Assembly of First Nations until June 1998.

In the Native community, an Elder is a Medicine Man and Spiritual Healer. Herb has taken the lead role in working toward healing individuals and communities.

« A Community Action, Intersectoral Approach to Youth Health Promotion in Ukraine »	Le lundi 20 juin 11 h - 12 h 30
Paulette Schatz, directrice de projet (Ukraine-Canada) et coordonnatrice des programmes régionaux	The Canadian Society for International Health

SOMMAIRE : The main aim is to provide an example of a sustainable approach in program design and delivery to working with youth and health promotion through international collaboration. Specific examples of community action and supportive organizational environments will be given. In 1997, the Ukrainian government called on Canadian health promotion expertise to support its efforts to improve the health of its young people; the following year the Youth for Health Ukraine-Canada project was launched, funded by the Canadian International Development Agency and managed by Canadian Society for International Health. The main objective of the seven-year project was to develop a multi-level, intersectoral youth health promotion model that could be adapted to regional, district, city and village settings. The goal of the Model has been to develop regional and local public policies, programs and structures that promote health among Ukrainian children and youth as well as develop a national youth health promotion program. The Ukrainian Institute for Social Research was the lead organization in the development and implementation of the Model. Partners included ministries of health, education, and family and youth, as well as the Kyiv City Government, youth NGOs and regional, district, city and village governments. You will be given an overview of the situation of youth health in Ukraine and a description of how the Model was designed, piloted and adapted. The lessons learned and challenges (including those related to cultural and community differences) will be discussed.

BIOGRAPHIE : Paulette Schatz is the Project Director of the very energetic Youth for Health project in Ukraine which is managed by the Canadian Society for International Health and funded by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

Paulette has over twenty years experience managing large, multi-faceted public health and primary health care projects in Central and Eastern Europe and on community-based projects in Africa. Her publication in the Health Promotion International Journal entitled The adolescent sexual world and AIDS prevention: a democratic approach to programme design in Zimbabwe has been a topic of discussion in other parts of Africa.

Among her many recognitions, in January of 2004 she received a certificate of Gratitude from the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine for the "significant personal contribution of developing friendly relations between Ukraine and Canada and the implementation of social and legal protection of youth".

Paulette was the first international guest to address the Parliament of Ukraine in November, 2003. She spoke to over 800 attendees in Ukrainian advocating for the support of a National Youth Health Promotion Action Plan.

She is a member of the Temporary Special Commission of the Verkhovna Rada (Parliament) of Ukraine on issues of HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Drug Addiction with a focus on creating a Centre of Excellence for Children infected with HIV and AIDS in Ukraine. Paulette took the lead in developing a CSIH proposal to CIDA for a Centre for Children with HIV/AIDS in Ukraine project which should begin this summer.

She is from Hafford, Saskatchewan, is married with four daughters.

« À SUIVRE »	Le jeudi 23 juin 13 h 30 - 15 h
Phil Jackson, directeur, département de planification stratégique et implémentation	Santé publique, Ministère de la santé de l'Ontario

SOMMAIRE : À SUIVRE

BIOGRAPHIE : Prior to taking on this role, Mr. Jackson was the Director of the Secretariat established to assist the Expert Panel on SARS and Infectious Disease Control (Walker Panel) whose role was to provide their best advice on how to re-equip our health sector to better cope with infectious disease outbreaks and to address major health emergencies. He was instrumental in supporting the Walker Panel in producing their interim and final reports on the state of public health in Ontario. This led to the release of Operation Health Protection which reflects the government's commitment implementing the recommendations as set out in these two major reports.

Phil Jackson has held key positions within the Ministry's integrated Policy and Planning Division. He held director positions in both the Health Information and Sciences Branch and the Strategic Health Policy Branch where he led the development of the $30 million Ontario Stroke Strategy, first of its kind in North America and has served as the Coordinator of the Aboriginal health office. Phil Jackson has played a significant role in the drafting of the 2003 Ontario report «Charting New Territory in Health Care» which examines genetic testing, gene patenting and the implications of developments in the genomics for the future of health care. Phil has served on multiple national and international committees, in his spare time he enjoys not serving on committees.

SOMMAIRE : Aboriginal people across North America define health and well-being as physical, mental, emotional and spiritual balance. For centuries, Aboriginal people have used the Medicine Wheel as visual symbol to depict this physical, mental, emotional and spiritual balance. That is why it is used as a holistic model to promote health in the Aboriginal community. This model allows Aboriginal people to practice their cultural ways which incorporate spirituality into their every day lives. Other health models that do not consider spirituality are culturally inappropriate and unbalanced to Aboriginal people. Understanding Aboriginal perspectives on health and well-being is essential to promoting Aboriginal health. In this session, each of the four elements will be examined as a way to strengthen community action and in turn promote health in our communities. The Elders say that we have everything we need in our community to live the good way of life (Mino-Bimaadiziwin). We simply need to look towards the strengths in our cultural practices.

BIOGRAPHIE : Ghislaine Goudreau is a member of the Algonquin of Pikwàkanagàn. She works as a Health Promoter at the Sudbury & District Health Unit and is in the process of completing her Master of Science Degree in Health Promotion from the University of Alberta via distance education. The title of her thesis is "Exploring the Connection between Aboriginal Women's Hand Drumming and Health Promotion (Mino-Bimaadiziwin). Ghislaine believes in building on the strengths in the Aboriginal community. She has been a member of the women's hand drumming circle, the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers, for 7 years. In 2000, Ghislaine had a vision of studying hand drumming with the members of the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers acting as co-researchers. Together, they utilized an Indigenous Research Methodology to collect and analyze the data. One of Ghislaine's proudest accomplishments was being the Aboriginal Committee Chairperson for the 1999 (HPSS) Health Promotion Summer School in Sudbury where an Aboriginal stream was introduced for the first time.

«Promoting Bimaadiziwin (Good Life)»	Le mercredi 22 juin, 11 h - 12 h 30
Dr. Brenda Restoule, psychologue - programme en santé mental	Shkagamik-Kwe Health Centre

SOMMAIRE : The Anishnabe teaching of bimaadiziwin or good life recognizes the importance of living in balance that considers our mental, emotional, physical and spiritual aspects of life. As workers in our communities we are often confronted with difficult and challenging issues and cases that can sometimes create unbalance for us. It is important for us, as workers, to acknowledge the challenges we face so that we can move back into a state of balance and lead a good life or bimaadiziwin. As workers we become the models for the community on how to live a good life or bimaadiziwin and we must know how to strengthen our internal abilities to manage challenges, create opportunities and foster growth and development. This workshop will explore how the seven grandfather teachings can be applied in our personal and work lives to create bimaadiziwin or good life. In examining how to incorporate the seven grandfather teachings into our lives we learn valuable lessons on how to strengthen communities and create growth. The presenter will share her own story of recreating balance in her life after dealing with a personal loss.

BIOGRAPHIE : Dr. Brenda M. Restoule is from Dokis First Nation (Ojibwe). Her spirit name is Waub-Zhe-Kwens (Little Swan) and she is from the Eagle Clan. Brenda completed her undergraduate degree from the University of Western Ontario, graduate training from Queen's University and is a Registered Psychologist in Ontario. She presently works with 2 First Nations (Nipissing and Whitefish Lake First Nations) and 1 urban Aboriginal organization (Shkagamik-Kwe Health Center) where she develops evaluation protocols and provides prevention, promotion and intervention services. In her capacity as a psychologist she strives to combine western and Anishnabe teachings to promote positive mental health and wellness in the workplace and the community. Brenda is the Ontario board representative on the Native Mental Health Association of Canada since 1994. In this capacity she has made a presentation to Senator Michael Kirby regarding mental health issues and advocated for a national Aboriginal mental health policy. She has worked with and for Aboriginal people in a number of capacities including research assistant with the Royal Commission of Aboriginal Peoples, Aboriginal counsellor at Kingston's Prison for Women, workshop facilitator on the Dream Catcher Tour and, has developed manuals and delivered training/workshops on a variety of topics to promote best practices in mental health service delivery for First Nations people. Brenda is particularly interested in suicide prevention and intervention. She strongly advocates for strengthening community action by building capacities in our communities that acknowledge and recognize our gifts and teachings.

« Using Community-Based Research(CBR) to Design Community Interventions »	Le mardi 21 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Sarah Flicker, chercheuse en chef	Wellesley Central Health Corporation

SOMMAIRE : So how do you use evidence to design appropriate interventions? This workshop will examine some traditional (e.g. literature reviews) and some innovative (e.g. photography and video) approaches to gathering evidence for intervention design and development. It will then delve into the nuts of bolts of things to consider as you develop new intervention strategies.

Participants Will Learn:

- Different approaches to "gathering the evidence," "needs assessments," and "strengths-based planning"
- How to use 'evidence' to design your intervention
- Developing logic models of practice

BIOGRAPHIE : Sarah Flicker is the Chief Research Scientist and the Wellesley Central Health Corporation. In that capacity, she works with local organizations across the GTA on developing research agendas to answer pressing urban health questions. Sarah is near completion of her PhD in Social Science and Health at the University of Toronto's Department of Public Health Sciences. Her dissertation work focuses on the complexities of research-consumer dynamics in CBR with a specific focus on collaboration with youth. She has been an active member of the TeenNet Research Group throughout her doctoral studies. Her research interests are in the areas of youth health, health promotion, HIV and community-based participatory research. She holds a MPH in Maternal and Child Health and Epidemiology from UC Berkeley and an honours degree in Anthropology from Brown University. Sarah sits on a number of community boards, including Planned Parenthood of Toronto.

Patsy Beattie-Huggan	The Quaich
Michelle Everest, ND, Ph.D., candidate au doctorat en psychologie communautaire et docteure en médecine naturopathique

SOMMAIRE : The Circle of Health® (1996) is both a dynamic framework for health promotion and a tangible tool used by educators, planners, researchers, front-line service providers, and community workers to apply the concepts of health promotion to real world scenarios that affect health and well-being. Constructed using the theoretical frameworks of the Ottawa Charter, determinants of health, and the First Nations Medicine Wheel, the Circle of Health has a wide range of applications beyond health promotion. This tool is also readily adaptable to justice, economic, business and environmental issues which intersect with and influence individual and community well-being. Developed in Prince Edward Island in 1996, the Circle of Health continues to gain popularity nationally and internationally. The purpose of this session is to introduce the theoretical basis of the Circle of Health and how it can be applied in diverse ways to strengthen and guide the development of healthy and safe communities.

This workshop will provide a presentation on the background and development of the Circle of Health; Engage participants in analysis of case stories of its application; and discuss the breadth of its potential applications. At the end of the session, participants will have gained familiarity and an introductory level use of the Circle of Health in strengthening community action.

BIOGRAPHIES: Patsy Beattie-Huggan holds a Bachelor of Nursing from the University of New Brunswick and an MSc in Nursing and Health Studies from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. She has a broad background in the health sector as an instructor and administrator in nursing education and as Director of Community Development for the PEI Health and Community Services System during health reform of the '90s. During that time Patsy played a key in facilitating the development of the Circle of Health. She is currently principal of The Quaich Inc. a consulting company located in Charlottetown which amongst other things, develops and markets innovative health promotion knowledge products. Patsy and her team are currently enjoying their role of coordinating the 2005 Atlantic Summer Institute on Healthy and Safe Communities at UPEI. She lives in Charlottetown with her husband Lyall, pals Tessa (canine) and Bob (feline), and is only a phone call away from her two adult children in Germany and Newfoundland.

Michelle Everest is a licensed Doctor of Naturopathic Medicine in private practice in Toronto, Ontario. She is a founding member and Director of Research of the Association of Perinatal Naturopathic Doctors (APND).

Michelle is currently completing her PhD studies in Community Psychology at Wilfred Laurier University with a focus on community health. As a partner member of the National Network on Environments and Women's Health (NNEWH), she has recently collaborated on a national consultation pertaining to women's urban health issues. She has been an active conference presenter and workshop facilitator on a variety of health-related research projects throughout her career. Michelle, who is the mother of two young daughters, will be a facilitator at the York University Summer Institute Mothering, Work and the Family in July 2005.

« The Effectiveness of Community Interventions: a New Framework »	Le jeudi 23 juin, 9 h 30 - 10 h 30

SOMMAIRE : The Public Health Agency of Canada and the Canadian Consortium for Health Promotion Research have been working together since 2003 to develop a framework to assess the effectiveness of community interventions in the federal government contributions programs. This framework provides a way that community contexts, community engagement, and collaborations in addition to outcome evaluations can be an important part of assessing the effectiveness of community interventions. The framework will be presented and participants will be given an opportunity to use it individually and as a group to explore its application. Although this is still a work in progress, it represents some of the latest thinking in this area.

BIOGRAPHIE : Suzanne Jackson is the Director of the Centre for Health Promotion at the University of Toronto. She has conducted research in community capacity indicators, economic evaluation in health promotion, empowerment indicators, indicators of health promotion for international use, and community systems. She specializes in participatory planning, research and evaluation consultations with grassroots community groups and community health organizations. Suzanne has worked in health promotion research for ten years in Canada and internationally and she has eleven years accumulated experience working in the public sector for the Ontario Ministry of Health and the Toronto Department of Public Health. Suzanne received her PhD from the School of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Waterloo. She has been President of the Ontario Public Health Association, vice-president of the Canadian Public Health Association and chair of the Board of Directors of ICA Canada (a community development and facilitated group decision-making organization). She has been invited to speak on health promotion topics in various parts of Canada, USA, Jakarta, Australia, Mexico, Colombia, Germany, and Brazil.

SOMMAIRE : In this final session of the "strengthening community action" theme, Malcolm Shookner will help the participants see the connections between all of the sessions in their concurrent theme in relation to the theories and models previously presented.

- Which models work best for participants?
- What can they take home and put to use?

There will be small groups where participants will discuss how to implement the ideas from the speakers in their own workplaces. Issues and ideas previously collected at the end of each day will also be discussed.

BIOGRAPHIE : Malcolm Shookner has over 30 years of experience in human services, community development, health promotion, and social policy. « Navigating the Workplace Health -Productivity Matrix: Concepts and Options »	Le lundi 20 juin, 13 h 30 - 15 h 00
Martin Shain, scientifique principal	Centre de toxicomanie et de santé mentale (CAMH)

SOMMAIRE : This session will provide an introduction to "The Workplace Health-Productivity Matrix". Developed for Health Canada, this is a map of the various approaches that can be taken when conceptualizing and planning health promotion initiatives in workplace settings. The various approaches differ according to the relative emphasis placed on health and productivity as primary concerns, values or motivating factors. The approaches vary also in terms of their relative emphasis on individual or organizational influences on health and productivity.

As a way of helping potential users choose where they want to enter the Matrix, a "Navigator" in the form of a brief self-scored questionnaire is provided in Part 2 of the session which will be facilitated. Part 2 will also attempt to locate the material to which participants have been exposed during the week within this matrix or framework.

BIOGRAPHIE : Dr. Martin Shain is Founder and Director of the newly formed Neighbour at Work Centre, dedicated to the promotion of fairness and reasonableness in employment and other contractual working relationships. (www.neighbouratwork.com)

Martin is also

- a Senior Scientist at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health in Toronto.
- cross-appointed with the Department of Public Health Sciences in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto.
- Scientific Advisor to the Global Business and Economic Roundtable on Addiction and Mental Health.

His background includes Law, Criminology and Social Sciences. His interests have been focused for the last ten years on ways of modifying the organization and design of working and learning environments to make them both more health promoting and effective. Currently he is working on policy, research, development and evaluation projects with, among others, Weyerhaeuser and the IWA, B.C. Hydro, Health Canada, The Canadian Safe School Network, the Department of National Defence, the Canadian Diabetes Association, the Ontario Physical Health Education Association and the Toronto Police Service. He is also a partner in projects with the National Quality Institute. He writes and speaks extensively on the subject of health, productivity and social capital.

SÉRIE 3: SÉANCE 2
« Creating Supportive Work Environments »	Le mardi 21 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Nora Spinks, présidente	Work-Life Harmony Enterprises

SOMMAIRE : Work-life balance: employees want it, managers need it, and organizations and society can't afford to ignore it! Success and prosperity depends on healthy individuals and healthy communities. People have multiple responsibilities, diverse needs and often conflicting priorities. People need work experiences where they can reach their full potential, be fully engaged, meet their personal and professional goals and objectives and be able to make a contribution to their communities. Exceptional leaders create work environment where people can achieve work-life harmony. Learn how successful organizations around the world are implementing workplace policies, programs and practices, governments are establishing public policies and communities are offering supports to help families achieve work-life harmony.

BIOGRAPHIE : Nora Spinks is President of Work-Life Harmony Enterprises, an international consulting and training firm based in Toronto. For more than 20 years, Nora has been providing leadership to leading corporations, governments, labour and community groups on work-life issues by focusing on creating supportive work environments, strengthening families and building healthy communities.

An experienced researcher and consultant, Nora has developed and implemented a variety of unique federal, provincial, community and corporate programs focusing on employee health and well-being, family care, workplace flexibility and work-life harmony. She developed Canada's first national Family Care resources and referral program and the first national network of employer-supported short term and seasonal childcare services. She is currently involved in the development of back-up childcare centres in Toronto and advocating for workplace and community supports for families with extraordinary care needs.

Centre for Health Promotion
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

As a recognized leading authority on work-life issues Nora is a sought after media contact and is quoted and profiled widely in print and on radio and television nationally. She is the author of The Manager's Work-Family Tool Kit, a frequent contributor to Canadian HR Reporter and HR Professional, and a regular lecturer Rotman School of Management at U. of T., Schulich School of Business at York University, Richard Ivey School of Business at the University of Western Ontario, Queen's School Of Business. Nora's work has recently been included in text books; Advancing Women's Careers, and Managing Human Resources.

Nora has been actively involved in the development of the Centre for Families, Work and Well-being (CFWW) at the University of Guelph. Her other community endeavours have included active involvement with the Centre for Workplace and Community Well-being, Canadian Child Care Federation, The Learning Partnership, Conference Board of Canada, and Eva's Place; North York's Emergency Home for Youth.

SÉRIE 3: SÉANCE 3
« Implementation Issues: Changing Organizational Culture »	Le mardi 21 juin, 11 h - 12 h 30
Harvey Skinner, professeur et directeur	Département des sciences de la santé publique, Faculté de médecine, Université de Toronto

NB -ATELIERS EN DEUX PARTIES- VEUILLEZ VOIR BOÎTE À OUTILS (SÉRIES A)

SOMMAIRE : Practitioners working in public health and health care organizations are under increasing pressure to increase quality, put prevention into practice and deal more effectively with the behavioural aspects of chronic diseases such as diabetes. Yet, they often face organizational barriers and lack of support. Experience shows that if you put good practitioners into poorly organized settings, then the system will 'win out' over time.

This Workshop presents a Five-Step Model for improving health organizations in prevention and behavioural health care:

- Step 1. Build motivation for organizational change
- Step 2. Strengthen organizational capacity for improvement
- Step 3. Identify strategic directions in prevention and behavioural health care
- Step 4. Conduct a critical functions analysis
- Step 5. Improve performance using rapid cycle change and Quality Improvement tools.

The model integrates improvement initiatives at both the individual (practitioner-client/patient) and organizational levels. It provides direction and practical tools for reorienting health care services, one of the five coordinated actions in the WHO Ottawa Charter for Health Promotion. The model and tools are described in a book by Harvey Skinner entitled Promoting Health Through Organizational Change published by Benjamin Cummings, San Francisco, 2002.

In this workshop emphasis will be placed on Step 1: changing the organizational culture and building motivation for change. A related Workshop (Toolbox for Organizational Change: Five-Step Model: June 21, 3:30-5:00pm) will present organizational change tools using active learning methods.

BIOGRAPHIE : Harvey Skinner received his PHD in Psychology from the University of Western Ontario. He is a Registered Psychologist in Ontario and a certified trainer in Motivational Interviewing.

Dr. Skinner has extensive experience in organizational change. He led the merger of three academic departments to form the Department of Public Health Sciences at the University of Toronto. This interdisciplinary department, with over 200 faculty and 200 graduate students, functions in Canada as a leading school of public health. As a member of the Board of the Canadian Public Health Association and Canadian Health Network, Dr. Skinner has a special interest in international health and services as consultant in public health. Dr. Skinner has served as an expert advisor to the World Health Organization as well as the U.S. National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

He is the author or co-author of 7 books, over 020 articles and chapters, and various assessment instruments. Dr. Skinner has been a pioneer in the use of computer technology in health. In the 1999s, Dr. Skinner was one of the first to initiate a major program of research on using the Internet for integrating health care and health promotion. Three of his instruments are widely used internationally for assessment.

Internationally, Dr. Skinner was one of the first to focus on a new area linking organizational improvement and health promotion. His expertise and advice are regularly sought by health organizations, governments, universities and practitioners.

« Diversity and Inclusion »	Le mercredi 22 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Baldev Singh Mutta, agent de développement communautaire	Département de santé, municipalité régionale de Peel

SOMMAIRE : The presentation is designed to look at how organizations can create supportive environments at work for the inclusion and managing of diversity. A diversity project undertaken at Peel Health will be shared with the participants. The successes and challenges of this project will be highlighted. A question and answer period will follow the presentation. The presentation will include:

- creating a culture that embraces diversity
- avoid pitfalls - why diversity programs fail?
- conducting a diversity audit
- recruiting for a diverse workplace
- making room at the top
- sharing "Towards Achieving Equal Access at Peel Health" project

BIOGRAPHIE : Baldev Mutta has been working in the community development field for the last 30 years and his community development projects have received international recognition. At the health department, his main area of work is related to diversity and enhancement of Peel Health's programs and services to the diverse communities. He is a Board Member of several social service organizations in Peel and Toronto. He has several research studies to his credit.

Mr. Mutta is often sought as a speaker on the issues of diversity, cultural competence, cross-cultural counselling skills, organizational change, and community development.

« Evaluation strategies and Evidence of Success: One Journey Taken To Create A Healthy Learning Community »	Le jeudi 23 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Noelle Andrews, directrice, développement et apprentissage organisationnels	Association des infirmières et infirmiers de l'Ontario
Barbrara Ronson, consultante	Centre for Health Promotion, Université de Toronto

SOMMAIRE : Participants who attend this session will hear about the journey undertaken by ONA to create a workplace aligned with a clear organizational vision for the future of ONA including broad agreement on that desired future among members and staff. Participants will also hear about the initiatives undertaken to align ONA structures, skills, strategies and culture to produce the following strategic outcomes:

- Well-defined and understood strategies for achieving the organizational vision;
- Redesigned work processes to provide improved and more cost effective services;
- An organizational and governance structure aligned to implement those chosen strategies;
- Clear accountabilities in role relationships in all parts of the organization;
- Skills transfer and development to aid the achievement of ONA's vision; and,
- The definition of a new culture at ONA, and sustaining cultural change.

This session will highlight the tools to measure the organization's achievement of these outcomes.

BIOGRAPHIES :

Noelle Andrews is the Director for Organizational Learning and Development with the Ontario Nurses' Association (ONA). She is a Registered Nurse and holds a Masters degree in Leadership and Training from Royal Roads University.

Prior to joining the staff of ONA in 1988 Noelle practiced her profession in teaching and community hospitals. She became involved in ONA and held seats on the ONA Board of Directors from 1983 to 1987 including two years in provincial office as provincial Secretary Treasurer.

Centre for Health Promotion
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Since joining the staff of the ONA Noelle has worked in many areas including leading the unions Pay Equity activities, government relations, Director of Research, Education and Union Serves for members.

In 1995 Noelle had the opportunity to lead a major initiative focused on transforming Ontario's Health Care System and the Ontario Nurses' Association. The initial External project commenced in 1995, and its focus was on the empowerment of ONA membership and through them influence and shape the way Health Care is delivered and the quality of service provided. The second phase of the project commenced in 1996 and continues to this time. It focuses on the transformation of the Organization through a shared vision for the future, developing shared strategies with both membership and staff; redesigning work processes to improve services to members; aligning structures to implement the strategies; establishing clear accountabilities and role relationships; and ultimately creating a new culture in the organization.

Noelle's career goal is to fuel the creation of learning organizations and influence the values held in society through her chosen work. Her personal goal is to inspire the creation of kinder and gentler environment, where people thrive and grow

Barbara Ronson has been co-chair of the Centre for Health Promotion's and OPHA's Ontario Healthy Schools Coalition for the past 5 years. She previously served as secretary and co-chair of the Centre for Health Promotion's School Health interest group. She obtained her Ph.D. in Education (program evaluation) in 1994 after working as a teacher of English and E.S.L. and computer applications.

Barbara has managed projects and research as a consultant at the Centre for Health Promotion for the past 7 years. Among her contracts have been a "Youth for Health - Ukraine Canada" project; the "Newmarket Youth Health and Active Living project"; the "Community Mobilization Program" of the National Crime Prevention Centre; and a national literacy and health research project. Barbara conducted an initial literature review and discussion paper for the Ontario Physical Health and Education Association's "Active Healthy School Community"/"Living School" initiative funded by the Diabetes strategy of the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care. She has also contributed to papers and think tanks on reducing health disparities funded by the Canadian Institute for Health Research and to a recent book on Social Determinants of Health: Canadian Perspectives edited by Dennis Raphael. She is currently conducting research on Active and Healthy Schools for the Ontario Physical and Health Education Association (Ophea) and for the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (CAHPERD) and OISE/UT.

Barbara is an experienced facilitator and community organizer. She led a community development project involving a Search Conference in East York/East Toronto in 1997 and 1998, helping to forge a team to address the ongoing needs of infants and young children in that community. She also helped bring together a strong team to address the needs of youth in the Newmarket community in 2000 and succeeded in raising over $50,000 to launch a youth health initiative there. One of that team's latest successes is the opening of a new youth centre and skateboard park as recommended by youth participating in the Newmarket Youth Health and Active Living Project in 2001. She continues to be a team player on a highly successful CIDA funded project on youth health in Ukraine that she and her colleagues at the Centre for Health Promotion helped the Canadian Society for International Health to launch in 1998. She draws heavily on her knowledge of organizational transformation best practices, concepts and tools which she honed as a consultant at Quantum Solutions Canada Inc., a company that specializes in organizational transformation, as well as her knowledge of health promotion theory and practice gained through her work at the Centre for Health Promotion.

« Santé pour tous dans le nouveau millénaire »	Le mardi 21 juin, 15 h 30 - 17 h
Suzanne Schwenger	Centre ontarien d'information en prévention (OPC)
Christiane Fontaine

SOMMAIRE : En s'inspirant d'exemples concrets provenant des communautés francophones, cette présentation se veut un survol du concept d'inclusion qui tient compte des déterminants de la santé et ce, dans une perspective de promotion de la santé. Par le biais d'activités d'apprentissage interactives, les participants pourront se familiariser avec les différentes stratégies qui permettent de développer des interventions inclusives. Des thèmes tels que l'engagement communautaire, le concept derrière le développement du sentiment d'appartenance, les indicateurs d'inclusion sociale seront au coeur de cette présentation.

BIOGRAPHIES : Suzanne travaille dans le domaine de la promotion de la santé au COIP depuis plus de 13 ans. Suzanne Schwenger est titulaire d'une maîtrise en Travail social et éducation. Parmi ses passions: l'engagement communautaire, le développement de politiques publiques et le dialogue électronique. Elle est présentement consultante en promotion de la santé dans le projet « Prévention des AVC », un projet qui a pour but de prévenir les accidents vasculaires cérébraux.

Consultante bilingue en promotion de la santé, Christiane Fontaine a acquis de l'expérience dans l'élaboration de ressources pratiques pour les organismes et communautés francophones. Dans le cadre de son travail au COIP, elle offre des services de consultation, de réseautage et de formation (conception et prestation) et travaille à l'édition du bulletin Le Bloc-Notes. « Désengagement, réactivation et mobilisation des communautés Francophones minoritaires en Ontario »	Le mercredi 22 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Marcel Grimard, président	Association des communautés Francophones de l'Ontario à Toronto

SOMMAIRE : Claudine Moise conclue sa thèse de Doctorat en sociolinguistique ainsi : « plus les personnes s'engagent dans la communauté francophone, plus elles sont pessimistes vis-à-vis sont avenir, et moins les personnes s'impliquent plus elles voient l'avenir de façon positive. »

Comment peut-on expliquer ce paradoxe identitaire dans les communautés Francophones en Ontario? Quels sont les effets de ce paradoxe sur notre intervention quotidienne dans nos communautés respectives, mais surtout sur notre perception de nos communautés? Toutefois, ce paradoxe identitaire peut-il cacher des problématiques sociolinguistiques beaucoup plus complexes tel que le droit de participation, les processus d'exclusion/inclusion, la notion de pureté linguistique, etc?

Cet atelier visera à outiller le/la participante à comprendre en partie la problématique des communautés Francophones de l'Ontario dans son caractère identitaire. Il vise à faire prendre conscience que notre rôle d'intervenant/e en santé ne s'arrête pas seulement à notre description tâches et que nos attitudes, valeurs et croyances ont des impacts sur comment nos communautés s'épanouissent et se perçoivent.

BIOGRAPHIE : Marcel Grimard est étudiant au Doctorat en Éducation au programme de Sociologie et d'équité sociale. Il a complété sa résidence. Le titre provisoire de sa thèse est : Le discours identitaire des Queers Francophones de Toronto : de l'acte de l'invisibilité à la reconnaissance de sa contribution dans le discours communautaire. Il a participé à plusieurs recherches dont la Recherche Prise de parole qui étudiait le discours identitaire des communautés francophones minoritaires de l'Ontario et de l'Acadie sous la direction de Monica Heller et Normand Labrie du Centre recherche en éducation Franco-Ontarienne, associé avec l'Institut de recherche pédagogique de l'Ontario affilié avec l'Université de Toronto. Il a prononcé et écrit de nombreuses conférences au Canada, aux États-Unis et en Europe sur la question du discours identitaire des Queer Francophones.

Il est présentement co-chercheur avec André Samson de l'Université d'Ottawa sur une étude portant sur l'implication bénévole des personnes Francophones vivant avec le VIH dans les organismes Francophones de Toronto.

Il est également le président du conseil d'administration de l'Association des communautés Francophones de l'Ontario à Toronto (ACFO-TO.) Il est le parrain du projet « Les amis/es des services en Français, » qui a pour but de développer la prise de conscience des Francophones dans la prise en charge personnel de leur droit linguistique.

« The Effectiveness of Community Interventions: a New Framework »	Le jeudi 23 juin, 9 h - 10 h 30
Suzanne Jackson, directrice	Centre for Health Promotion, Université de Toronto

SOMMAIRE : The Public Health Agency of Canada and the Canadian Consortium for Health Promotion Research have been working together since 2003 to develop a framework to assess the effectiveness of community interventions in the federal government contributions programs. This framework provides a way that community contexts, community engagement, and collaborations in addition to outcome evaluations can be an important part of assessing the effectiveness of community interventions. The framework will be presented and participants will be given an opportunity to use it individually and as a group to explore its application. Although this is still a work in progress, it represents some of the latest thinking in this area.

BIOGRAPHIE : Suzanne Jackson is the Director of the Centre for Health Promotion at the University of Toronto. She has conducted research in community capacity indicators, economic evaluation in health promotion, empowerment indicators, indicators of health promotion for international use, and community systems. She specializes in participatory planning, research and evaluation consultations with grassroots community groups and community health organizations. Suzanne has worked in health promotion research for ten years in Canada and internationally and she has eleven years accumulated experience working in the public sector for the Ontario Ministry of Health and the Toronto Department of Public Health. Suzanne received her PhD from the School of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Waterloo. She has been President of the Ontario Public Health Association, vice-president of the Canadian Public Health Association and chair of the Board of Directors of ICA Canada (a community development and facilitated group decision-making organization). She has been invited to speak on health promotion topics in various parts of Canada, USA, Jakarta, Australia, Mexico, Colombia, Germany, and Brazil.

Wendy Pinder, coordonnatrice du projet

SOMMAIRE : This session will provide an overview of the Canadian Health Network (CHN) www.canadian-health-network.ca a bilingual, non-commercial website providing an extensive collection of over 17,000 resources on health promotion, and disease and injury prevention information to all Canadians. The website is supported by a pan-Canadian network of over 26 independent health care organizations, covering a wide range of disease, health issues and population groups working collaboratively to bring a health promotion framework to the CHN resource collection and communications. In addition, CHN is now part of the newly created Public Health Agency of Canada (PHAC) and as such is positioned to become the main consumer portal for health information.

This workshop will provide an overview of CHN and what it has to offer, to both consumers and health intermediaries. It will demonstrate how to access the collection of resources, review the range of communications and specially written how-to articles, and provide some examples to show the significant collaboration behind the scenes. The workshop will also provide an opportunity to discuss how health promotion applies to CHN and explore the direction for the future.

BIOGRAPHIES : Krissa Fay is the Network Development Coordinator for the Health Promotion Affiliate, Canadian Health Network (CHN) Project. Her role is to build and support partnerships and collaborations with the CHN and its affiliates, regional networks, and other health organizations to develop the health promotion capacity of the CHN and its Website. Krissa completed a Master's Degree in Social Work with a concentration in social welfare policy in 2000. Since then she has worked in research, community development and capacity building, and program evaluation with a number of social planning, public health and social services organizations.

Debbie Field, directrice générale	FoodShare Toronto
Ellen Desjardins, Santé publique, nutritionniste communautaire	Region de Waterloo Department de santé publique

SOMMAIRE : he Brazilian Experience: from Sacalo Markets to the Zero unger Movement:

The Brazilian anti-hunger movement is the most developed in the world, For over a decade they have implemented some of the world's most innovative programs. Now their new president Lula has committed to ending hunger. Debbie Field will describe the Brazilian Zero Hunger movement and their innovative food security programs. (Debbie Field)

Foodlink Waterloo Region: connecting farmers and consumers:
Foodlink Waterloo Region is an example of how civil society takes over the task of creating rural-urban links and promoting localization of the food system. Ellen Desjardins will talk about how public health initiated this organization, and the connection between local seasonal food, public health and community food security. Ellen Desjardins)

BIOGRAPHIES : Debbie has been the Executive Director of FoodShare Toronto for the past thirteen years and has helped to build FoodShare into Canada's largest food security organization, with the mission of working with communities to improve access to affordable, healthy food -- from Field to Table.

Building on the organisation's anti-poverty agenda, FoodShare now also focuses on nutrition concerns and the need for a sustainable agricultural system. Believing in the power of food, they work to change the way our society sees food. Rather than fast food, FoodShare promotes home cooking. Rather than eating on the run, FoodShare promotes meals as opportunities for families, friends and communities for sharing and community building. Rather than any food at all, FoodShare encourages locally grown healthy food. A long standing social movement activist, Debbie has been credited with bringing hope to community organising during tough times of government cutbacks by focussing on grass roots mobilization.

Ellen has a master's degree in Community Health from the University of Toronto. She has worked as a public health nutritionist at Toronto Public Health and Region of Waterloo Public Health for 19 years. Her primary focus has always been food security - first at the individual level and later at the population health level. Currently, Ellen is involved with a "health determinants" approach to food, which means gathering data and building community involvement to change public policy in Waterloo Region. As a nutritionist, she works with farmers, politicians, planners, environmentalists, academics, NGOs and other stakeholders to collectively improve the overall food system.

NB - ATELIERS EN DEUX PARTIES - PARTICIPANTS DOIVENT ASSISTER À LA SÉANCE SIMULTANÉE (SÉRIES 3, SÉANCE 3 : CREATING SUPPORTIVE ORGANIZATIONAL ENVIRONMENTS)

SOMMAIRE : This toolbox session builds on the author's Workshop "Implementation Issues: Changing Organizational Culture" (June 21, 11:00-12:30) that addressed the challenges of changing organizational culture and building motivation for change. A Five-Step Model is reviewed for improving health organizations in health promotion, prevention and behavioural health care:

- Step 1. Build motivation for organizational change
- Step 2. Strengthen organizational capacity for improvement
- Step 3. Identify strategic directions in prevention and behavioural health care
- Step 4. Conduct a critical functions analysis
- Step 5. Improve performance using rapid cycle change and Quality Improvement tools.

Selected organizational change tools will be presented using active learning methods. The model provides direction and practical tools for reorienting health services, one of the five coordinated actions in the 1986 WHO Ottawa Charter for Health Promotion. The model and tools are described in a book by Harvey Skinner entitled Promoting Health Through Organizational Change published by Benjamin Cummings, San Francisco, 2002.

BIOGRAPHIE : Harvey Skinner received his PHD in Psychology from the University of Western Ontario. He is a Registered Psychologist in Ontario and a certified trainer in Motivational Interviewing.

Dr. Skinner has extensive experience in organizational change. He led the merger of three academic departments to form the Department of Public Health Sciences at the University of Toronto. This interdisciplinary department, with over 200 faculty and 200 graduate students, functions in Canada as a leading school of public health. As a member of the Board of the Canadian Public Health Association and Canadian Health Network,

Dr. Skinner has a special interest in international health and services as consultant in public health. Dr. Skinner has served as an expert advisor to the World Health Organization as well as the U.S. National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

He is the author or co-author of 7 books, over 020 articles and chapters, and various assessment instruments. Dr. Skinner has been a pioneer in the use of computer technology in health. In the 1999s, Dr. Skinner was one of the first to initiate a major program of research on using the Internet for integrating health care and health promotion. Three of his instruments are widely used internationally for assessment.

Internationally, Dr. Skinner was one of the first to focus on a new area linking organizational improvement and health promotion. His expertise and advice are regularly sought by health organizations, governments, universities and practitioners.

Centre for Health Promotion
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

SOMMAIRE : In recent years, the rise in environmentally related children's conditions has become a cause for concern among many parents, health professionals, educators, government policy makers and the Canadian public who realize that children need protection from an environment which has become increasingly toxic. The key Canadian/North American health outcomes with epidemiological evidence of links to environmental hazards are: asthma, cancer, neuro-behavioural and developmental effects, low birth weight and birth defects (Rod Raphael, Director General, Safe Environments Programme, Healthy Environments, Consumer Safety Branch, Presented at Canadian Association of Physicians for Environment (CAPE) public meeting, Nov.2000).

This workshop will highlight issues in the growing public debate about the implications of our contaminated world on children's health in the context of primary prevention on these issues. "Clips" from If You Love Our Children: Children will be shown and discussed. Participants will engage in addressing the question: if many children's adverse health conditions are largely environmentally linked, can they therefore be largely preventable?

The workshop is designed to raise awareness, explain the issues and present safe alternatives to harmful substances in the air, water, food and soil with the aim of education and action for prevention. Resources will avail participants with tools to engage in education and action for healthy homes, communities, workplaces and the earth - intended to encourage engagement in personal, social, and policy change.

BIOGRAPHIE : Dorothy Goldin Rosenberg holds a Masters in Environmental Studies (York University) and a PhD (University of Toronto). An education and film consultant, she researches, writes and speaks on environmental health, equality, social, economic and environmental justice, peace and energy issues. She has worked with the National Film Board, schoolboards, non-governmental organizations, health professional and policy groups on these issues. She was principle research consultant and associate producer of the documentary video, Exposure: Environmental Links to Breast Cancer and researcher/writer of the accompanying guidebook called Taking Action for a Healthy Future. Ghislaine Goudreau, promotrice de la santé and member of the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers	Santé publique à Sudbury

SOMMAIRE : The presenter, a member of the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers, an Aboriginal women's hand drumming circle located in Northern Ontario, will describe how her study uncovered the importance of traditional activities, such as hand drumming, in promoting balance and well-being within the Aboriginal communities. Building on strengths and utilizing the community are common to both Aboriginal beliefs and health promotion theories. Health promotion to Aboriginal people is described simply as living the good life (Mino-Bimaadiziwin) and practicing the traditional ways within the Circle of Life also known as the Medicine Wheel. An adapted Circle of Life model was utilized for this study. It incorporated the main elements of self: the physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual as well as the appropriate determinants of health: culture and social support networks. All of these elements, as well as the importance of utilizing an Indigenous Research Methodology, will be discussed.

BIOGRAPHIE : Ghislaine Goudreau is a member of the Algonquin of Pikwàkanagàn. She works as a Health Promoter at the Sudbury & District Health Unit and is in the process of completing her Master of Science Degree in Health Promotion from the University of Alberta via distance education. The title of her thesis is "Exploring the Connection between Aboriginal Women's Hand Drumming and Health Promotion (Mino-Bimaadiziwin). Ghislaine believes in building on the strengths in the Aboriginal community. She has been a member of the women's hand drumming circle, the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers, for 7 years. In 2000, Ghislaine had a vision of studying hand drumming with the members of the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers acting as co-researchers. EFT is easily learned by anyone and self-applied. No drugs, hypnosis or equipment are involved; no surgical procedures, needles, pills or chemicals; no pushing or pulling on the body. The results are rapid, long-lasting and gentle and in most cases, permanent.

The approach is very empowering because you can help yourself. Everyone can do it and once you learn EFT, it's yours forever!

BIOGRAPHIE : Jo-Anne Eadie has been using and teaching EFT for five years. She sees clients in Group Sessions for weight releasing, smoking cessation and stress. She provides individual appointments for anxiety, stress, phobias, panic attacks, phobias and anger.

« The Resiliency Map: An innovative tool to assess worker stress and coping »	Le mercredi 22 juin, 15 h 30 - 17 h
Yvette Perreault, directrice	AIDS Bereavement Project of Ontario

SOMMAIRE : Resiliency is the capacity of individuals and groups to move forward with hope, clarity and effectiveness in the face of the multiple losses, complex grief, and ongoing transitions related to our human service work.

The Resiliency Map is a practical teaching and healing tool derived from qualitative research on HIV-related multiple losses. The Resiliency Map is a "hands on" teaching tool that has been used cross-culturally in diverse loss related environments to provide understanding about loss and resiliency for bereaved client groups, professionals and community based volunteer, board and agency staff.

The Map is also a healing tool that allows people to weave a narrative as they walk their journey with loss experiences. The Resiliency Map is a 16 x 16 square foot floor-quilt or "story blanket" with purposely-colored layers and words that reflect the complexity of our loss environments (see below image). This innovative resource is designed to engage people in a meaningful dialogue of our resilient capacity and the complex issues elicited by our involvement in human service work.

BIOGRAPHIE : Currently the Director of the AIDS Bereavement Project of Ontario and co-creator of Project Sustain, a national program looking at resiliency in the AIDS field, Yvette Perrault has been a front-line community organizer and counselor for over 2 decades. She served as AID Support Program Director at the AIDS

«Aboriginal Hand Drumming Workshop»	Le mercredi 22 juin, 15 h 30 - 17 h
Ghislaine Goudreau, promotrice de la santé and member of the Waabishki Mkwaa Singers	Santé publique à Sudbury
Brenda MacIntyre, membre fondatrice	Spirit Wind

SOMMAIRE : In Ontario, many Aboriginal people have returned to the drum, the heart beat of Mother Earth. The healing power of the drum has freed the suppressed voices of countless Aboriginal people and, in turn, those voices are able to share with others.

The hand drumming circle will begin with a short cleansing ceremony (smudging). In the circle, participants will learn various songs and teachings of the Aboriginal hand drum. They will be able to participate in the hand drumming and singing at their own comfort level. All participants, whether they sing, use a drum or shaker or simply listen, will experience relaxation and a sense of the re-energizing heart beat of the drum.

BIOGRAPHIES : Brenda MacIntyre, a Juno award-winning Aboriginal and urban music artist, recently graduated from Centennial College's Aboriginal Entrepreneurship Development Program. Brenda's business Get BUTTERFLIED specializes in personal empowerment, stress relief and inspiration through music and meditation. Her Aboriginal drum group Spirit Wind just released their 3rd CD Awakening, and she is working on her next solo release Butterfly Soul.
