You are invited to

“Transformations of the Mind: Technology and the Future of Creativity”

A conversation with Jacek Dukaj

When: October 30, 2019, 6:00pm-8:00pm
Where: Father Madden Hall, Carr Hall, St. Michael’s College, 100 St. Joseph St.

Jacek Dukaj is one of Poland’s most esteemed and prolific authors of speculative fiction, winner of the European Union Prize for Literature and Kościelski Award for his 1000-page novel Ice.

Social, cultural, and technological transformations are re-shaping our minds and lives, redefining what it means to be human. How do we reckon with these seismic shifts? What can a writer of fantasy tell us about writing “at the limits of humanity, reason & language”?

The conversation — with the participation of Ursula Phillips, an outstanding translator who is currently working on the English translation of Ice — will be moderated by Eva Stachniak, a Canadian writer of historical fiction, and hosted by Tamara Trojanowska, a Professor of Polish theatre and literature.

Our collaborators and sponsors:

For more information about another event with the participation of Jacek Dukaj at the International Festival of Authors, see: